Enriching the Campus

Military veterans, as students, provide a valuable dimension and depth to a college campus.
Military veterans have unique perspectives on learning and real-life situations that can enrich the learning environment for all students.

In turn, a successful college experience can give veterans a positive transition from active military service back into the citizen workforce.

Defiance College has a long tradition of welcoming military veterans as students of higher education. It offers a supportive environment for veterans, regardless of their age or how recent their military service. For several years, the College has had the designation of a Military Friendly School, and it participates in the Yellow Ribbon program.

The Yellow Ribbon Program is available to veterans of the post-9/11 era through participating colleges. It guarantees free tuition to qualifying veterans, with private institutions and the Yellow Ribbon Program splitting costs that may exceed the established cap. While most veterans have been able to access benefits through the traditional GI Bill, Yellow Ribbon bridges the difference in pricing and gives veterans the opportunity to choose an institution that best suits their area of interest.

According to registrar Mariah Orzolek, Defiance’s enrollment of veterans has increased significantly since the inception of Yellow Ribbon in 2009. Her office has a VA-trained school certifying official, Carrie Relyea, to ensure that veterans receive all benefits to which they are entitled. There are currently nearly 25 veterans enrolled, and an additional 40 students are enrolled as dependents of veterans.

DC provides a veterans resource center in Defiance Hall. Veterans can also utilize services offered to all students, including counseling and academic advising. To recognize them for their service, there is an annual Veterans Day program in November and a Military Appreciation Day held at a home basketball game.

Veterans’ academic interests cross all departments, from business to social work to digital forensics, says Cathy Mikula, coordinator of nontraditional student support. “Faculty love having them in class for the maturity they bring, the example they set for other students, and the experiences and perspective that they can share. The respect that they show to other students, to faculty, and to staff is noticeable.”

“A college degree offered opportunities I otherwise would not have been able to achieve. Education is important to my family, and I wanted to set a good example for my sons, showing them that you have to put in hard work in order to become successful.”

Dennis English

As an Army infantryman, Tyson Bostelman, Wauseon, completed two tours of duty in Afghanistan. One tour was in the Korengal Valley, also known as the Valley of Death. His second tour was in the Pesh River Valley or Nangalam. He and his fellow soldiers experienced daily firefight. “My first tour, for most of it, we were in two to three firefights a day,” he recalls. “We got mortared regularly, and I lost one of my best friends there, SPC Robert Donevski.” He also lost another close friend in Afghanistan, SSG Brown. They are not forgotten, he says.

When Bostelman finished his military duty in September 2013, he decided to take advantage of his military education benefits to pursue his ultimate goal of working with the FBI or CIA. He enrolled at Defiance College because of its location and small size and is currently studying toward a degree in criminal justice.

For veteran Dennis English, Defiance, it was the DC staff that helped him make the decision to enroll and pursue a college diploma. “The Center for Adult Programs played a large role in my choosing and registering for Defiance College,” he says. “Carrie Relyea was also incredibly helpful throughout my time at Defiance College. These individuals really made it easy for me to focus on my schoolwork …. They were always on top of whatever needed to be done, and I could not have continued without their help.”

English originally served four years in the Army, then re-enlisted in the Marine Corps. His tour of duty included the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean.

He graduated from DC in May 2014 with a degree in art. “The professors were experts in their relevant field of study, and - let's be honest - who wouldn't find Doug Fiely to be entertaining in class?” he adds.

“A college degree offered opportunities I otherwise would not have been able to achieve. Education is important to my family, and I wanted to set a good example for my sons, showing them that you have to put in hard work in order to become successful.”

Dr. Tim Rickabaugh, professor of exercise science, has experience both as veteran-turned-student and college professor. He served in the Army Reserves while in graduate school and recalls that it was often a challenge to align his summer Reserve training with his graduate coursework.

As a faculty member, he has an even greater appreciation for veterans in the classroom. “They most often are very focused and determined students who serve as great role models for all of our students,” he says.

Defiance College works to make sure that veterans receive the support needed to transition to college life. “They are a great bunch of people. It is a privilege and a pleasure to serve them,” says Mikula.
The Post 9/11 GI Bill allows veterans to transfer their education benefits to a dependent. “I have been able to attend Defiance College ... and am aiming to graduate this December because of the Post 9/11 GI Bill and our school's participation in the Yellow Ribbon Program,” says Ericha, who is majoring in multiple areas - athletic training, wellness and corporate fitness, physical education and health.

When Ericha’s parents, Jean and Stephen, graduated from high school, college wasn’t an option for them, so they joined the Air Force. “After meeting in Basic Training and eventually getting married, my mom made my dad promise that no matter what, they would put the education of their children first. They wanted to help the four of us get the traditional college education that neither of them could,” she says.

Now in her final semester as an undergraduate, Ericha says her primary career goal is to find a job. “Ultimately, I want to find a good balance between athletic training and teaching, and I would like to do that in a setting that allows me to give back to my military community.” While growing up, she and her family spent seven years overseas. “My dream job would be to become a Department of Defense Dependents Schools teacher and athletic trainer. In that setting I would be able to relate to my students on a level most teachers cannot. It would be my way of saying thank you to our service members and their families in a very hands-on and rewarding way.”

Ericha reflects on the sacrifices her parents have made for country and family.

“My dad has been active duty for over 30 years now, and even though we have been through a lot, none of us would go back and change it. I am the second of four, my parents are happily married and have all four kids in college. I was lucky enough to have parents who always put education above almost everything, houses, money, and even my dad’s career.”

And, she knows that an important part of her life story occurred in Defiance, Ohio. “Defiance College is the only place that could have made my last four and a half years not only possible but wonderful as well.”
Dr. Mark Lee ‘92, a native of Sherwood, Ohio, enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps through the Delayed Entry Program in 1984.

“I was only 17 years old and my father, Cork, had to sign my initial contract enlisting me for active duty on June 2, 1985, 14 hours after graduating high school,” Lee explains.

As Lee tells his story, “My classmates from high school went to college, and I went off to the Marine Corps to form my leadership skills and my manhood. Also, of note, I was accepted in the Marine Corps Warrant Officer program at the end of my first enlistment, but I wanted to go to Defiance College to earn my bachelor’s degree and try out the USMC Reserves. I did, but the military and the ‘esprit de corps’ never left me - veterans know what I mean. It’s an addiction that once it enters your bones, it never truly ever leaves.”

“I have been lucky to have served in the active USMC, USMC Reserves, Army National Guard, U.S. Army Reserves and active duty Army. I have never run into anyone who has done this in my 30 years in the service except me,” he says. Lee rose from the enlisted ranks to achieve the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in the U.S. Army.

“I am what the military calls a ‘Mustang,’ a prior service enlisted man who rose up through the ranks as an officer. There are very few of us, and only a handful in the military who have as much education as I have earned.”

Mark’s assignments span 30 years and took him to California, North Carolina, Virginia, Kansas, Washington, among others here in the states, and South Korea, Japan, Kuwait, and Afghanistan.

He is a qualified Air Defense Officer, Civil Affairs Officer (Special Operations), Special Forces Officer, and a functional area Comptroller. He has been a member in the military of all wars for his generation: Desert Storm/Desert Shield, Operation Iraqi Freedom (Iraq/Kuwait), and Operation Enduring Freedom (Afghanistan twice).

Lee used his service time to acquire his education, taking his first college class at Central Texas College in the fall of 1985. “My platoon sergeant gave me grief about it until the day I PCS (permanent change of station) out to Okinawa, Japan. Well, Sarge, I have earned a B.S. in mathematics (from Defiance College), an M.Ed. in educational administration/leadership (USC), Ph.D. in higher educational administration/leadership (USC), Juris Doctorate (JD) or law degree, and an MBA with a concentration in public administration - all paid for by the military, I have been truly blessed and lucky,” he says.

Looking back, Lee considers his best assignment was when he was an ROTC instructor at UCLA, with his Ft. Jackson and Ft. Bliss tours running a close second. He also has great fondness for the Tampa Bay area around MacDill Air Force Base and the surrounding communities of Tampa, Clearwater, and St. Petersburg.

He shares some of his insights about the Army and life: “The first thing I learned about the Army is ‘hooah.’ There are 1,000 or 10,000 or 100,000 different ways to say ‘hooah.’ But I learned that it is more than just a battle cry - it’s a way of life. It says that you will never quit, never surrender, never leave your buddy behind. It says that you are proud of the hardships you have endured because there is deep meaning in every one of them.”

“I have learned that the Army, above all, is a learning organization. From rapid development and adaptation of doctrine, to command organization, to movement of brigade combat teams and modular headquarters, to the way people are promoted, the Army is constantly changing and adapting to meet the challenges of the day. As General George Marshall once punned, ‘Soldiers are intelligent. Give them a bare tree; let them supply the leaves.’

“We often forget the impact of war on those who were alongside our fallen. That loss impacts them for the rest of their lives, including me. I have lost 52 men that served under or beside me in OIF and OEF.”

Mark and his wife, Cynthia, who is also an LTC/05 in the Army with almost 24 years of service, will be retiring soon and plan to make their home in the St. Petersburg area.
World War II was a grim time and college enrollment hit an all-time low, but the end of the war saw a revitalization here at DC as well as throughout the country. Hundreds of veterans arrived on campus using the GI Bill to achieve their educations.

The college quickly expanded to meet their needs – in housing, classrooms and classes. The Hickory Hut, Tin Town and the Sessions Hall Annex were quickly constructed. Athletics, fraternities and other activities were revived.

Since then, veterans have been a proud part of the history of Defiance College, and we take this time to honor their service to our country, as represented in these vignettes of DC alumni veterans through the decades.

JOE DAWSON ’50 served in the U.S. Navy during WWII, stationed in the Southwest Pacific as a radio man, taking code and messages. He especially remembers being on board when the ship was in a tornado in the Philippines in 1945.

“The Government treated me fine,” Joe says, and he attended Defiance College on his GI benefits after he was discharged. Joe and wife Cathy reside in Pinckneyville, Ill.

JIM MOATS ’59 served in the U.S. Air Force 1951-1955 during the Korean War. Jim trained in bases in Texas, Wyoming and Illinois and attended Cryptology School. He was shipped to the UK/European Theaters in December 1951 and was stationed at SAC (Strategic Air Command) bases in England and French Morocco, North Africa. He also spent two months at the Tule Air Force Base in northern Greenland. He achieved the rank of Sergeant 1st Class.

Jim remembers spending Christmas Day 1951 doing KP and serving “giblet gravy” to seasick GIs in the midst of a big North Atlantic storm. Other memories of his time in service include being in England for the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II and encountering his Defiance recruiting sergeant while at Nouasseur Air Force Base in French Morocco. Jim and his wife Barbara reside in Chesterfield, Mo.

After graduating from Defiance College, FRAN CARLEY ’61 joined the U.S. Marine Corps, and attended Officers Candidate School in Quantico, Va. He served as an infantry officer, a platoon commander as 2nd Lieutenant, and company commander in Vietnam for a company called Suicide Charley (Charlie Company 1st Battalion 7th Marine). Fran states that his biggest challenge was “fighting the politics while trying to fight the war.”

Fran’s duty tours also included serving in the second division on a Mediterranean cruise with the Sixth Fleet during the Cuban missile crisis, being stationed at Guantanamo Bay, and on Okinawa before going to Vietnam in 1966. He was discharged in 1967. Fran and his wife, Susan, reside in Fort Myers, Fla.
SUSAN D. BARNES ’78 enlisted in the U.S. Air Force in 1983 and served for 25 years, achieving the rank of Chief Master Sergeant. She served at Charleston Air Force Base in South Carolina, Grand Forks AFB, North Dakota, Maxwell Gunter AFB in Alabama, and spent two years at Sembach Air Base in Germany. She identified her biggest accomplishments as managing the flight/inspection scheduling and performance analysis of C-17 aircraft at Charleston, one of the busiest Air Force bases during the aftermath of 9/11, and achieving the top enlisted rank (only one percent of the enlisted force may serve in the CMSgt rank). Her biggest challenge: combating sexist attitudes in the service. Now retired, Susan resides in Navarre, Fla.

MAJOR DAVID IKE ’00 is currently serving on active duty with the U.S. Army. He joined the Army as an enlisted soldier in January 2000, right after he finished at Defiance College in December. He completed Officer Candidate School and was commissioned as an officer in October 2002. David has served in eight locations stateside and completed three tours in Iraq and one in Egypt. He is currently in the School of Advanced Military Studies in Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

“I believe my biggest challenge is yet to come,” writes Ike. “I will spend 2015 as an operational planner for the Joint Command in Afghanistan. I have never worked at that level and it has a myriad of dynamics. But the Army wouldn’t assign me there if I couldn’t handle it.”

Major Ike went on to say he finds service as rewarding as it is demanding, and has learned more than he ever could have imagined. “I credit my experience at DC with setting the foundation for it all,” he concludes.
For four days in June, Defiance College had the honor of hosting the Moving Wall – Vietnam Veterans Memorial. Hundreds of visitors traveled to campus to view the wall and to pay their respects to the men and women whose names are etched on the memorial wall.

The event, several years in the making, was spearheaded by the Defiance County Veterans Office with support from the Vietnam Veterans of America Post 954, Defiance VFW Post 3360 and Ladies Auxiliary, Defiance DAV Chapter 36, Jewell American Legion Post 635, Defiance AMVETS Post 1991, Master Gardeners of Defiance County, and Defiance College.

The Veterans Office is staffed by veterans officer and DC alumnus Mike Williams ’79, benefits counselor Tanya Brunner, and administrative assistant Erin Clady. Brunner led a committee of more than 20 individuals including Vietnam veterans to plan the event to coincide with the 50th anniversary of the start of the Vietnam War.

The Wall was open to the public June 12-15 on the lawn between McReynolds and Whitney halls on Webster Street. The schedule also included the Quilts of Tears display in the Serrick Campus Center, quilts made of fabric sections provided by persons honoring or remembering those affected by Agent Orange. Each square is personalized with the story of a veteran or group, and the squares are sewn into quilts.

A display of military equipment used by the legendary Red Horse Squadron was on display in the parking lot behind Whitney and McReynolds halls.

Retired Army Col. Ward Nickisch conducted a seminar about the search and recovery operations for POWs and MIAs.

The event concluded with a public ceremony at the Wall to commemorate the anniversary of the war. Participating in the program were Mike Williams, Col. Nickisch, and DC alumnus Rev. John Stites ’70.

HOMECOMING 2014
Homecoming 2014 brought many familiar faces back to campus. Alumni joined current students for a week of celebration.

Terry Morman, Class of 1990

Terry Morman lettered in basketball at Defiance College his entire four years, from 1986 to 1990. He was a member of the 1987-1988 District Championship team, a three-year starter, and was named to the First Team Academic All-American in 1990.

Fourth all-time leading scorer in DC basketball when graduating, Terry is currently eighth in scoring. He was a career leader in three-point field goals and fourth all-time in three-point percentages. He set a single season record for three-point field goals made. While at DC, Terry was also in the Academic Honors Fraternity Tau Pi Phi, treasurer of Marketing Club, and in the Co-Op program.

He majored in finance/management at DC and earned his MBA from the University of Toledo in 1994.

He is vice president with the Hylant Group and serves as a board member of the Wood County American Cancer Society and Bowling Green Pee Wee Baseball. Terry and his wife, Tammie, reside in Bowling Green with their three children.

Morman said, “It is an extreme honor to be nominated for the DC Hall of Fame. I have many great memories of competition and was fortunate to play on very good teams with great players.” He called being inducted into the Hall of Fame “the topping to a great time and many memories of playing for DC!”

Kevin Wierman, Class of 1978

Kevin Wierman was nominated to the Hall of Fame because of his football and baseball accomplishments while at Defiance College. He lettered in football all four years, making First Team All-League and receiving All-American Honorable Mention in 1975. In baseball, he lettered four years, serving as captain in 1978, and was All-League First Team in 1978 as well.

Mike Snyder, who coached Wierman through high school football at Bath as well as his entire college career, recalled him as a quality kid. “Kevin is a very good, hard-working person with high integrity and standards.”

Wierman majored in elementary education at DC and received a master’s in education administration. He has taught history and English at Bath High School, coached baseball and football at the junior high and the varsity level. As assistant football coach at Bath, he had two state semi-finalists, four league titles and five play-off conferences. As assistant varsity baseball coach, his team earned a league title.

Kevin says that the nomination to the Hall of Fame was an honor and a surprise, since he never considered his endeavors to be outstanding. “They did, however, prepare me for a lifetime in coaching. It gives me great pleasure to know that someone thought highly enough of me to nominate me.”

He resides in Lima, Ohio, and is married to his high school sweetheart, Janet. He is an active member of Grace Baptist Church, a member of the Bath Education Association, the Ohio High School Football Coaches Association and the Ohio High School Baseball Coaches Association. Kevin and Janet have a daughter and a son.

Megan Thigpen Grieser, Class of 2003

Megan Thigpen Grieser carried her love of volleyball into her professional life, and spent time as assistant volleyball coach at the Savannah College of Art and Design. She also served as the graphic designer for the athletics department.

Megan was a four-year letter winner in Yellow Jackets Volleyball. She achieved the recognition of being the greatest setter in school history, with 2,667 career assists ranking her first in school history. A two-time team captain, Megan also set multiple single-season records for passing and serving. Her .990 serve percentage from her freshman season is first all-time, and she established individual bests for total assists, assists per game, assist percentage and total sets in a season throughout her final three years at DC. Her accomplishments earned her the Duane C. Hocking Female Athlete of the Year Award in 2003, All-Conference Second Team Honors in 2002 and honorable mention in 2001.

Megan majored in graphic design, earned a perfect 4.0 GPA, and graduated as valedictorian for the Class of 2003. She was on the Student Athletic Advisory Committee for three years and helped with Big Brother/Big Sister summer camps along with working at the McMaster Center gym and also off-campus.

She is married to DC alum Eric Grieser ’04, and they reside in Charlotte, N.C.

“My time at DC was so meaningful in so many ways that being considered for this award touches deep in my heart,” Megan says.

Charles Nafziger, Class of 1973

Charles Nafziger made his mark playing guard on the Yellow Jacket basketball court, in what one sports writer summarized as a brilliant career. He lettered four years and served as captain one season. In 1973, he was named Male Athlete of the Year, All-Conference First Team, Most Valuable Player in the Wooster Classic, NAIA National Tournament, Kansas City, and in the Ohio-Indiana All-Star Game. His 1,472 career points were the second highest at that time, and his four-year record finished at 85-23.

Calling this a humbling experience, Charles says, “Much of my success at DC and since can be attributed to being surrounded by quality people with a common goal. When I think of the group of people who have been inducted in the past, I am not sure I deserve to be honored in this way. To be associated with DC has brought great pleasure throughout the years.”

Nafziger graduated with a degree in math and has spent his career as a high school math teacher at Pettisville High School, where he coached basketball from 1980 to 2000. He has also served on the Alumni Varsity D board. He and his wife, Laura, reside in Archbold and have two daughters and five grandchildren.

Ernesto Vilar, Class of 1979

Ernesto Vilar, class of 1979, was inducted into the DC Hall of Fame because of his outstanding prowess on the gridiron. His honors include lettering in football three years, being named All-League three years, All-District three years and All-American Honorable Mention.

Ernie came to DC from Miami and remembers the Midwestern hospitality he was shown by so many: Coach Mike Snyder, Randy Buchman, Dr. Luchies, Gerry Mallott, Bev Harrington and then-President Marvin Ludwig. As Ernie put it, “I became part of many extended families.”

The football program at DC was exciting and fun for Vilar. “When we won the conference during my sophomore year, I thought it was the Super Bowl! Repeating the feat the following year and being an important part of a winning program for four years was even better,” he related.

Ernie majored in accounting, finance and marketing, and was on the academic honors list four times.

He is senior vice president of the Trucane Sugar Corporation and resides in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., with his wife Julie. They have three children.

Thinking back to his time at DC, Ernie remembered, “Back then, while in a classroom, during a lecture or on the football field we often heard the phrase ‘lessons for life’ and thought it was a cliché. How wrong. I am really honored to be inducted into the Athletic Hall of Fame of an institution that was instrumental in my professional life.”

A change in senior leadership at Defiance College took place this summer when Dr. Ken Wetstein accepted the title of vice president of Institutional Advancement. Dr. Wetstein is a well-known presence on campus, having served most recently as vice president for student engagement and dean of students. In his new position, Dr. Wetstein oversees the College’s advancement programs, including fundraising, alumni relations, planned giving, and corporate and foundation relations.

“I am delighted that Ken has agreed to serve as our new vice president for Institutional Advancement,” said President Mark C. Gordon when he made the announcement. “He has many talents as well as very close ties with the Defiance area community. I am confident that he will do a superb job in leading our fundraising efforts.”

Responding to the president’s comments, Dr. Wetstein replied, “I am honored that President Gordon has asked me to lead the College’s development office. I look forward to working with the president and a talented staff in the department in advancing the mission of the College. I have come to love DC during my eight years in student life and athletics, and I am eager to engage with our alumni and supporters who share my affection and admiration for the college.”

Dr. Wetstein earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in Political Science from Eastern Illinois University (1991) and a Master of Science in Education (1993). He has worked in Resident Life at Eastern Illinois and Southwest Missouri State Universities as well as serving as the Director of Student and Professional Affairs at St. Louis College of Pharmacy. While at St. Louis College of Pharmacy Ken was honored to be named the inaugural recipient of the College Enhancement Award in recognition of his exceptional work improving the student life environment at the college.

In December of 2005 he was awarded a Ph.D. in higher education administration from the University of Missouri – St. Louis, just before coming to DC in January 2006.

Dr. Wetstein is a native of the St. Louis metropolitan area, growing up in East St. Louis as the youngest of nine children. He is very active in the Defiance Community. He often performs on the stage with the Fort Defiance Community Theater group and is the treasurer for the Young People’s Theatre Guild.

He is board chair of the Defiance Area Chamber of Commerce, and serves on the Defiance City Schools Foundation and the ProMedica Defiance Regional Hospital Foundation. He is a former member of the board of directors of the Defiance Area YMCA and an active volunteer with United Way of Defiance County. Ken and his wife, Carrie, have two daughters, Caitlyn and Chloe.
Dr. Harry Miller ’59

This year’s recipient of the Alumni Citation for Academic Excellence is Dr. Harry Miller, Class of 1959. Dr. Miller has had a long and distinguished history with Defiance College, as student and professor.

Miller’s college experience coincided with the development and launch of the Russian satellite, Sputnik, and science was very much in the national forefront. He graduated from Defiance College in 1959 with a Bachelor of Science in education, comprehensive science, and went on to receive the prestigious National Science Foundation Fellowship to complete research. His specialization was nuclear physics, and he earned his Ph.D. in 1963 from Ohio State University. The following fall, he returned to his alma mater to begin his 34-year career as a college professor.

It was while he was a student at Defiance College that he married his high school sweetheart. Gloria attended Defiance College as well, earning a teaching certification for elementary education.

Harry’s dedication to his profession was quite evident over the years and extended well past campus. During the summers of 1967 and 1968, he worked as physicist with the U.S. Army Missile Command at Redstone Arsenal in Alabama. On sabbatical in 1969 and 1970, he was a resident associate in the physics division at Argonne National Laboratory, Argonne, Ill. In 1987, Dr. Miller took a leave and traveled to Malaysia where he participated in the Malaysian Cooperative Education Program of State University of New York, and Gloria accompanied him. It was the trip of a lifetime, he remembers, and provided them with the opportunity to visit 13 different countries – including Hong Kong, Singapore, Thailand, New Zealand, Australia and even Russia.

At Defiance College, Dr. Miller served on numerous college committees, including teacher education, economic welfare, service learning and learning resources. He was a diligent teacher, always willing to give his time to students. Outside the classroom, he also gave assistance to students as a mentor the last two years of his career. Upon his retirement in 1997, he was honored with the title of Professor Emeritus. Since then, Harry has funded an endowed scholarship at the College to honor the memory of Eddie Pullen, a former student who died of cystic fibrosis.

Harry and Gloria have made their home in Port Orange, Fla. They enjoy spending time with their children and grandchildren. Even now, Harry is always the professor, as a photo shows him working through the physics of a zip line with the grandkids. In 2013, the Millers traveled via motorhome from Florida to Banff and Jasper National Parks in Canada and back, picking up family members in South Carolina and Idaho who joined them on the journey.

In addition to this Alumni Citation for Academic Excellence, Dr. Miller was recognized at the Presidential Brunch for remembering Defiance College in his estate plans.

Beverly Nolt ’74

Beverly Nolt’s career experience ranges from the oil rigs in Texas to medical facilities in Uganda and Botswana, and she is one of this year’s Alumni Achievement Award recipients.

By the start of her senior year at Orrville (Ohio) High School, Bev had narrowed her college choices until an admissions counselor from Defiance College visited her school, altering her selection process. Bev was intrigued by Defiance’s “four-one-four” program – offering a January winter term sandwiched between fall and spring semesters. A subsequent visit to the DC campus proved a positive experience and sealed her decision. “Everyone was so friendly,” Bev recalls. Her original intent was a major in elementary education, but classes with Professor Jim Birk and Dr. Bernie Mikula coupled with her initial winter term to Big Bend, Texas, prompted a switch to Natural Systems Studies. This led to a job in the east Texas oil patch as a drilling fluids technologist/ mud engineer. While working on the rigs, a job listing for a venereal disease investigator grabbed her attention though she initially thought it a hoax. She applied, landed the local position, and is now beginning her 36th year in public health – spanning local, state, national, and international arenas.

Twenty years after graduation, at a reunion of Southwest and Alaska Field Studies participants in Cincinnati, she and another DC alumnus who had taken the 1973 Big Bend Winter Term reconnected and in 1996, Bev and Bob Witzerman ’75 were married.

After 22 years with local and state health departments in Texas, Bev joined the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta in 2000. She has held a number of positions within the organization, beginning in the Sexually Transmitted Disease (STD) Branch, training STD supervisors and managers throughout the country. Other jobs included multi-year stints in international operations – Office of the Director, Adolescent School Health, and Women's Reproductive Health prior to joining the HIV/AIDS Global Health Program (GAP). In 2009, without any prior visits to Africa, she accepted a three-month assignment in Namibia, working with HIV/STD programs and construction projects for HIV testing and treatment. Three months became seven, after which she was offered a permanent post as Global AIDS Program Deputy Director for Botswana. Bev and Bob discussed the opportunity, packed up their dog and cat, and spent two years in what she describes as “an unforgettable experience and a wonderful country.”

Bev is very satisfied with the work, much of it funded within the President's Emergency Program for AIDS Relief started by President George W. Bush. This initiative was created to connect and coordinate agencies which had not previously worked together, including CDC, USAID, Peace Corps, and Department of Defense, to cooperate in the prevention, testing, and treatment of HIV/AIDS. Bev's job focuses on management and operations to ensure U.S. funds are spent responsibly. It can be challenging and trying but she also finds it very rewarding particularly when agencies come together to reduce and prevent “mother to child” transmission of HIV.

“One of the things I am proud of was being part of a small team who investigated and broke up a Botswana cartel which had been stealing U.S. funds for several years,” she relates. After returning from Botswana, Bev became CDC’s Deputy Director at Large for the world’s newest country, Republic of South Sudan, and has made numerous trips there until last December’s unrest forced operations to be moved to Entebbe, Uganda, for the short term. As result, she spent much of the past summer in Port au Prince, Haiti, supplying operational support.

On Sept. 4, Bev accepted a new position as CDC’s East Africa Team Lead in the Country Strategy and Management Branch. She will manage a team providing support to Uganda, Kenya, Ethiopia, Rwanda, and South Sudan.

David Gynn ’65

Defiance College is pleased to recognize David Gynn ’65 with the 2014 Alumni Achievement Award.

When David entered Defiance College, he planned to major in business, and hadn’t considered teaching. However, he was encouraged to go into business education to double his chance of getting a job after graduation. He remembers thinking, “I’ll teach for a couple years and then go into business.” The “couple years” turned into a couple decades and resulted in Dave receiving many recognitions for his outstanding work, including being the first Ohioan named National Business Teacher of the Year.

David attributes much of his success to the solid foundation he received at Defiance under the direction of Garnett Smith ’51, who was then associate professor of business education.

Smith encouraged her students to attend Ohio Business Teachers Association meetings, and twice David went to the state conventions. “I am thankful to her for getting me started in OBTA,” he said. “She made me realize the need to be a professional, as well as an educator.”

David went on to serve as president and secretary of the OBTA throughout his years of association with the organization.

He earned a Master of Education from Kent State University and has done additional post-graduate work at the University of Cincinnati and the University of Akron. The majority of David’s teaching career was spent as cooperative education coordinator in Ashtabula and Kent, where he taught and assisted and supported his students at their co-op jobs.

In addition to being named National Business Teacher of the Year in 1987, Gynn was also recognized as 1985 Ohio Business Teacher of the Year and 1990 Vocational Educator of the Year in Ohio.

David retired from teaching in 1990, and entered his business career, first as a vice president of the Telecommunity Credit Union and then as the business manager of his United Methodist Church. He also served for several years as volunteer coordinator at Coleman Professional Services before going into retirement full time.

David was very active in Kiwanis for many years, serving in local and state leadership positions and is now a volunteer advocate for Ohio AARP. He is also currently a member of the Board of Education for the Biomed Science Academy, a STEM school that is the fifth highest rated school in Ohio.

“Being the first in my family to earn a college education has changed my life. The small personal approach at Defiance could not be duplicated elsewhere. My DC education was my ticket to unlimited opportunities,” David says.

David and his wife, Patricia, reside in Kent, and have two grown sons, and grandchildren. The Gynns have just returned from the “trip of a lifetime,” three weeks touring the United Kingdom, with David’s sister and brother-in-law who are also DC alums, Barbara and Bruce Fisher, classes of 1966 and 1965 respectively.

Lesa Swisher Shouse ’04

Lesa Swisher Shouse ’04 is the 2014 Young Alumni Service Award recipient.

As a student at Defiance College, Lesa was a service leader and president and trip coordinator for the college’s chapter of Habitat for Humanity. She earned her bachelor of arts in communications and public relations and continued her education at Bowling Green State University, working with the Office of Service Learning as a graduate assistant. Lisa achieved her Master of Arts in College Student Personnel and worked at Owens Community College and then at the BGSU Career Center, first as advisor and then as assistant director/career center liaison to the college of business.

Lesa is currently the director of the Career Center at the University of South Florida St. Petersburg.

Throughout her college days and her professional life, Lesa has been involved in community service through a wide range of agencies, and has acquired a long list of recognitions to her name, including the National City Bank Champion Peer to Peer award in 2006, Leader of Promise: 100 Women of Influence in Girl Scouts of Western Ohio in 2012, and BGSU Outstanding Community Service Award 2009, to name just a few.

Lesa and her husband, Reggie ’04, have also been two of...
Ray Santiago '71

Ray Santiago '71 is being recognized with the 2014 Schauffler Legacy Award for his dedicated work and advocacy for human rights and social justice causes.

Ray’s parents emigrated from Puerto Rico to Spanish Harlem in New York City. His father worked as a laborer; his mother worked in a sweatshop until she was disabled by an injury. He and his siblings were educated through the NYC public school system. As the first of his family to attend college, Ray participated in a college-readiness program, which is where he learned about Defiance College.

Professor Jeffrey Weaner announced that Ray was selected for this year's Schauffler Legacy Award because from the start, Ray got involved in social activism. "He took the purpose of Schauffler and really has worked to advance humanity and achieve social justice," Weaner said.

In addition to his studies and being a resident hall assistant, Ray found time to work as a volunteer juvenile probation officer, participate in Leadership Training and Community Organization for Spanish Speaking of Northwest Ohio, and be involved with the Center for the Study and Advancement of Non-white Cultures, the Atlantic-Pacific Streets Neighborhood Council and Phi Alpha Theta. Ray was also a Schauffler Scholar in Social Work and was awarded the Schauffler Legacy Award for his dedicated work and advocacy.

Currently, Ray is the development officer for the Amherst, Mass.-based Peace Development Fund, a public foundation providing grants, training and resources in partnership with communities, trainers and donors who share PDF's vision for social change.

He is married to Dr. Margaret Reeves, senior staff scientist with the Pesticide Action Network of Northwest America. Ray and Margaret have a 13-year-old daughter, Tatiana, and the family lives in Oakland, Calif.

Elaine Kopke Gard ’72

Elaine Kopke Gard ’72 is this year’s recipient of the Schauffler Award in Christian Education. The award is given in recognition of her lifelong service to local churches in Christian education and faith formation. The Rev. Dr. Marian Plant '73, professor of religious and ministry studies, clearly remembers Elaine from their college days. “She was a role model for me,” Dr. Plant recalls.

Originally from the Cleveland area, Elaine majored in religion and Christian education, and she received the Schauffler Scholar in Christian Education Award at Defiance College.

Throughout her career, Elaine has been active in Christian education on the local church level. She served as a consultant to the Cooperative Christian Education Project with four UCC churches in the Greater Dayton area and as director of Christian Education and Youth at Trinity UCC in Miamisburg and Fairborn. She has directed children's choirs and chaired mission and outreach committees within those churches.

Elaine has served in leadership capacities at the Association and the Ohio Conference level of the United Church of Christ as well. She became a Commissioned Worker in 1978 and a Commissioned Minister of Education in 1986. She has served six years as a member of the Laity Leadership Department with the Southwest Ohio Association, including two years as the department chair. She has served on the...
Southwest Ohio Association Council, along with participating in or chairing various other Association committees on Christian Education. After moving to Newark, Ohio, she was a member of the Central Southeast Ohio Association Council from 2002-2005, and the 2004 moderator of the association. Since 2008, Elaine has been active with St. John’s UCC in Newark, helping with Christian Education, special events, children’s programming and women’s programming. As chair of mission and outreach, she was able to dramatically increase mission giving and involvement.

She has been co-chair of St. John’s Bethlehem marketplace, a biennial walk-through of Bethlehem involving up to three hundred cast members and volunteers. This project has raised several thousand dollars for the local food pantry.

“It has been my pleasure, my honor to try to do my best in what God has asked of me,” Elaine said.

She is married to John, attorney and trust officer at Park National Bank, and they reside in Newark. They have two adult daughters and three grandchildren.

Lisa Marsalek, previously the assistant dean of students and director of career development, has been named dean of students, succeeding Dr. Ken Weststein who was named vice president for institutional advancement.

“I am very pleased that we have someone of the high caliber of Lisa Marsalek ready to step in as our new dean of students,” said President Mark C. Gordon. “She has already proven herself to be an innovative and creative administrator, and I am very pleased that she has agreed to take on added responsibilities.”

Marsalek has 20 years of experience in student affairs. Before coming to Defiance, she worked at The Ohio State University, Case Western Reserve University, and the University of Toledo.

She earned a master of arts in higher education and student affairs, a master of labor and human resources and a bachelor of science in psychology, all from OSU. A northwest Ohio native, she graduated from Holgate High School.

Marsalek is a member of Zonta Club of Defiance and serves on the boards of Autism Model School, Toledo, and Harbor, Inc. She and her husband, Dan, are the parents of two sons, Nick and T.J.

The Defiance College athletic program has new leadership. Rudy Yovich was recently named to the position of athletic director, succeeding Jenni Morrison who left for a position at California University of Pennsylvania. In addition, Jodie Holava, head softball coach, has been named DC’s assistant athletic director.

Yovich was the director of athletics at Owens Community College in Toledo since 2011 and was assistant director of athletics at Indiana University-Purdue University in Fort Wayne from 2003 to 2011.

“We are very pleased to be able to have someone with Rudy’s experience, knowledge, and energy join our DC family as athletic director,” said President Gordon. “Jenni Morrison did a great job in this position over the past four years, and I am confident Rudy will be able to build on that foundation and lead DC athletics to even greater success.”

While at Owens, Yovich led an athletic department in which student-athletes improved both academically and athletically. During the 2012-13 season, student-athletes qualified for a record four national championships with every program qualifying for a regional tournament. The school had five All-Americans, nine Academic All-Americans, and two All-American Academic Teams, first-ever in school history. The school finished that academic year ranked 23rd nationally out of 401 schools in the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics Learfield Director’s Cup standings, the school’s highest finish ever.

Yovich earned his bachelor’s degree at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania and an MBA in sports management from Columbia Southern University.

Holava is the all-time wins leader in the history of Defiance’s softball program. She arrived at DC in 2006. Under her mentorship, the softball program has won three conference championships and finished among the top three in final standings in NCAA regionals during four of her years as head coach. The program has also excelled academically, earning numerous scholastic honors.

Holava earned her bachelor’s degree from Mount Union College and master’s degree from Cleveland State University.

“I am extremely pleased that Jodie has agreed to take on these additional responsibilities,” said President Gordon. “She has proven herself as a coach, a colleague, a mentor for our student-athletes, and as a leader on campus.”
Zexing (Raymond) Luo ’11 describes his journey from China to Defiance College to Yahoo!

By Kathy Punches ’96
Director of Public Relations and Marketing

From high school in China to college in Ohio and Indiana to a highly-sought position with Yahoo in Silicon Valley, Zexing Luo’s personal odyssey has been filled with hard work and perseverance. And his chosen career path of digital forensic science introduced him to, in his own words, “the coolest major I had ever heard of.”

Zexing Luo – known on the DC campus as Raymond – first learned of Defiance College through a family friend, Daniel Chao, a DC alumnus who worked for many years for the United Nations. Chao traveled to China with former president Gerald Wood when Raymond was in his sophomore year in high school in the city of Qingdao (probably best known in the U.S. for its Tsingtao beer).

Chao introduced Raymond to President Wood during a visit to Qingdao, and the two talked about the young man’s college plans and how much he knew about America. Raymond recalls, “After the meeting, Mr. Chao told me that President Wood was surprised that during the conversation I kept speaking English and did not ask Mr. Chao for translation, even though my English was very broken back then, but I wasn’t afraid to try.”

At the end of the meeting, President Wood invited Raymond to come to DC after high school. “His invitation was like a golden ticket,” says Raymond, “because high school students in China have very little control of what academic field they can pursue and what school they can attend. Going to a school in America and studying whatever I liked sounded like an awesome idea.”

Raymond’s meeting with the president convinced him that Defiance College was the right place for him, so he did not apply to other schools.

One of the first things Raymond needed to do after arriving at Defiance College was to select a major. “I picked digital forensic science as my major, mostly because I thought it was the coolest major I had ever heard of, and I was very interested in computers during high school. So, I didn’t hesitate picking DFS as my major.”

His studies in digital forensic science introduced him to many real-world experiences. “I still tell people stories about me and the DFS major at DC,” he says. As a DFS student, Raymond took part in a cold case investigation with the Wayne County Prosecutor’s Office in Detroit. He interned with the Defiance County Sheriff’s Office and earned certification by the SANS Institute as a digital forensics analyst. “Thanks to the unique major and academics DC offers, I was able to enjoy a very unique college experience in a foreign country,” he adds.

In addition to his academic training, Raymond appreciated the environment of “very pure American culture” in which he was immersed at Defiance College. “I was highly motivated by such an environment to absorb large amounts of American culture and language,” he says.

“DC gave me a lot of memories, and I’d say the most memorable moment was when I accepted my diploma from President Gordon. My family, professors, and the entire class of 2011 enjoyed that moment with me. It was the greatest achievement for me in my life at that moment.”

Raymond credits his ability to hone his English language skills and adjust to and absorb American culture to his experiences at Defiance. “Thanks to DC, by the time I was enrolled at Purdue University for graduate school, I had little trouble making friends with everyone in the new environment.”

With a recommendation from DC faculty member Dr. Gregg Gunsch, Raymond applied to and was accepted in the Master in Information Security program at Purdue. “Some of my teachers at Purdue know Professor Gunsch personally,” says Raymond. Dr. Marcus Rogers leads the Cyber Forensics and Security Program at Purdue, while Dr. Melissa Dark is a well-known researcher in technology and information security policy. He also studied under Dr. Eugene Spafford, well-known in the security community and someone who travels to Capitol Hill and lectures politicians about information security.

After earning his master's degree, Raymond was quickly hired for a position in New Jersey. Soon after, he decided he should keep looking for alternative opportunities, and that is when he found his current job with Yahoo in California.

His title is platform production engineer, and he’s responsible for keeping Yahoo’s service working as designed “so our 800 million users around the world can enjoy Yahoo’s service 24/7,” he says. “You can see we have a lot of weight on our shoulders, but I definitely enjoy what I do, and I’m proud of what I do.”

With the constantly growing world of technology, Raymond envisions in the next few years things like cloud and wearable technology continuing to integrate with people’s lives and bring benefits all can appreciate. “I would like to contribute to such a process as a part of Yahoo,” he adds.

Realizing the impact Defiance College and the digital forensic science program have had on his life, Raymond hopes more students will consider DC as their college destination. “Over the time I have spent in the United States, DC has played a major role in shaping the person I am today, and there is no doubt I could not have reached the position I am in today without my four years at Defiance College.

“There is much to look forward to, and I cannot wait to see more DC students reach their dream.”

(This article is reprinted with permission. In October, DC alum Obie Mouser was honored by the Alumni Varsity D as a Coach of the Year.)

It was nearly a year ago that Obie Mouser hit the pinnacle in coaching when the longtime mentor led Defiance High School to the Division II state cross country championship.

While it may be the highlight of a coaching career at Defiance High School that spans nearly half a century, it is far from being the most important thing Mouser is about.

Now 68 years of age, Mouser has had an influence on the lives of so many student-athletes that have gone through the halls of Defiance High School while not only teaching, but coaching four different sports during his tenure.

Mouser first came to DHS in 1969 after graduating from Lima Senior in 1964 and Defiance College four years later.

Mouser, who went on to earn a master’s degree from Bowling Green State University, taught ninth and 10th grade social studies in his early years at Defiance.

It was at that time coaching entered the picture.

“They were looking for junior high coaches and I said ‘I’ll do it,’” Mouser reflected. “They had a lot of good kids back then.”

Mouser quickly moved up the ladder in basketball, working under Roger Renz in his final two seasons as DHS head coach in 1976-77 and 1977-78.

Renz then took the basketball job at Findlay High School and the Defiance head coach position opened up. Mouser lasted for just three years as the head coach despite a winning record in league play at 15-12.

“In those days there was not much patience. If you lost a couple years they went after you pretty solid.

“I knew the game, but I was not ready for the administration level at that time with all the expectations after Renz.”

Meanwhile, he became involved in another sport.

“It boiled down to they needed somebody to coach cross country and I took the job,” Mouser said. “I had run and been around it and knew I could help them learn quite a bit.”

The first team under the direction of Mouser went 20-0 and just missed going to state. Mark Koenig, a 2014 DHS Athletic Hall of Fame inductee, was the first of two state champions from his team.

Mouser coached cross country for seven years before shifting to the high school level in 1978.

Although not many coaching jobs were available, Mouser landed at the junior high level at the school where he first started coaching.

By the time he took the head coaching job in 1987, the junior high team had no home games and played all its games on the road.

Mouser guided the boys’ basketball team to the Division III state championship in 1996 and the girls’ basketball team to the Division III state championship in 1997.

In 2012, Mouser was inducted into the Defiance County Sports Hall of Fame.

Mouser is also a member of the Defiance City Schools Athletic Hall of Fame.

In the classroom, Mouser has taught physical education and health and coached the junior high boys and girls basketball teams.

Heather Babb, who played on the boys’ basketball team as a sophomore and junior, credits Mouser’s influence.

“He had a lot of patience and a lot of wisdom when it came to teams,” Babb said. “He always had a smile on his face and it showed on the sidelines.”

Babb said Mouser’s coaching style is laid-back.

“He was an easy-going coach,” Babb said. “He wasn’t a hard coach. If you did something wrong you didn’t want to do it again.”

Mouser has also coached golf, volleyball and track.

In three years as the head girls’ volleyball coach, Mouser guided the girls to a state championship in 1992.

“Being the coach of the state champions was thrilling,” Mouser said. “I was just so proud of those girls.”

Mouser coached the girls’ track team to a state championship in 1996.

Mouser said he will miss his students and the sense of camaraderie among the coaches.

inductee, was the leader of that 1973 squad.

"Coach always had a driver personality and infected the team with his competitive nature," Koenig reflected. "In those early years coach still had a strong Lima connection and I think he felt the need to show the big Lima schools that we were just as good or better. The summer before his first season as cross country coach in 1973, he drove us down to Lima to run hills in Faurot Park several times and then to the Lima Distance Carnival at the beginning of the season. He and the team made a statement when we won the team championship, and you could tell he was extremely proud to make the statement in Lima."

PRIDE

Nothing describes Mouser better than the word pride. It's a term he has used and continues to use as a coach.

"He had a lot of pride for his school Lima Senior and he brought that over to Defiance," noted Kirk Lehman, who played basketball for Mouser in the late 1970s and is now head basketball coach at DHS. "He always talked about how athletes playing for Defiance should approach it.

"He taught you to take pride in what you're doing. The one quote I'll always attribute to him was 'Talk is cheap. Show me on the floor.'"

Greg Kampe, a 1974 DHS graduate who has been head basketball coach at Oakland University the past 30 years, also points to pride when talking about Mouser.

"In this day and age the one characteristic a lot of kids don't have is pride," Kampe related. "That guy (Mouser) loved being so proud of his school and wanted to teach us to be that way.

"He coached all three sports I was in and he was all about having pride in Defiance and what you do. That's the guy in my life that taught me those lessons."

Those are lessons Lehman remembers well. "Like anybody into coaching, as you age and mature you deal with things a little different than in your younger years," Lehman said. "But the one thing he has always brought is an intensity level and pride about being from Defiance. And he gets across it's not okay to be second."

FIERY COACH

While pride became a theme with Mouser, his temperament was also well known - especially in his early days in Defiance.

"After 58 years of life I don't remember a lot, but the day I met him had an impact on my life," Kampe said of his first memory of Mouser. "There aren't many people that 45 years later I can remember the day I met them … but I do with him."

Mouser admits to being a bit too fiery in his early years of coaching.

"I got a number of technicals back then," Mouser said. "One day I got four technicals, two in eighth grade and two in the ninth-grade game and I wasn't even coaching them.

"That was not one of my better moments.

"We were at Lima South and we were beating them and they hadn't been beaten. There were students throwing popcorn on the floor. It was a fiasco."

The sport Mouser was coaching didn't matter, either.

"He might be the only cross country coach in the history of Ohio to break a clipboard after a cross country meet," said Jim Windnagle, who went to state in the 1970s under Mouser.

COACHING INFLUENCE

Lehman's love for Mouser brought his former mentor back to the sport of basketball. When Lehman took over as head varsity coach at DHS in 2003, Mouser came aboard as an assistant.

"He's a stickler for fundamentals and adamant about doing things right," Lehman said.

Mouser eventually called it quits on the hardwood two years ago.

But while Mouser retired from coaching basketball after the 2011-12 season, he remains a big part of two other programs at DHS - track and cross country - running the cross country show for all but one year since 1998.

In his career in the sport, Mouser has led the Bulldogs to 15 WBL titles and has had 13 teams advance to state, including 10 in Division I. But no team was able to get to the top until 2013, a big reason being many of his best squads were in D-I.

While time-wise not Mouser's best, the 2013 squad finally reached the top in winning the Division II state crown last November.

While Mouser is down to coaching just track and cross country now, it doesn't mean it is time to retire, despite winning that coveted state title in cross country last year.

As he has for nearly half a century, Mouser looks forward to the challenge while making memories for another group of teenagers.

"I'd like to think as a teacher and as a coach I've had a positive influence on the lives of a lot of kids," said Mouser, who lists former Lima Senior baseball coach Joe Bowers along with John Hurley and Roger Renz as huge influences in his life. "As a coach I've tried to get across the idea to work hard. When you face adversity you have to deal with it. You win and you lose in life, it's about making a commitment to the greater cause. That's important for kids to understand."

His former student-athletes can attest to that.

"He's had such an effect on so many guys' lives," Kampe said. "He's coached so many sports and he's lasted at the same place for so long, that's very unique. Not many people have done that."
Steve Sondergaard, J.D., professor of criminal justice, was recently elected to represent District Three at the Ohio State Bar Association Council of Delegates for a two-year term commencing July 1, 2015. District Three is comprised of Williams, Defiance, Paulding, Van Wert, Putnam, Hancock, Henry, Wood and Fulton counties.

St. John United Church of Christ recently honored Carolyn Small for her many years of excellent service as church organist. Carolyn, professor emerita of music at Defiance College, continues to serve as the organist at St. John after 56 years.

Chelsea Ludeman ’14, now a first-year graduate assistant at DC, was named the 2014 Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference Woman of the Year at the same time that her grandmother, Carol Ludeman, of Napoleon, Ohio, was recognized as the 2014 Henry County Senior of the Year. Chelsea told the Northwest-Signal that it was her grandmother who encouraged her to become a volunteer, and during her time at DC, she has held many volunteer and leadership roles.

It’s been a busy year for Dr. Doug Kane, associate professor of biology. He appeared recently on WBGU’s Northwest Ohio Journal as part of a panel discussing “Harmful Algal Blooms and the Toledo Water Crisis.” The program is in Northwest Ohio Journal #903. It also went to Columbus for statewide distribution on The Ohio Channel.

He also presented to the Defiance Rotary Club on “The Toledo Water Crisis and Harmful Algal Blooms” as part of their weekly speaker series. Further, restoration ecologist senior Alison Rifenburgh presented a poster titled “Water Quality Monitoring on the Upper Maumee River” at both the Lake Erie Binational Public Forum Conference, Oregon, Ohio (http://lakeerieforum.org/content/lake-erie-binational-public-forum-conference-sept-26-27-2014) and the National Center for Science and Civic Engagement 2014 Washington Symposium, Washington D.C. (http://www.sencer.net/Symposia/DCSymposium2014PosterAbstracts.cfm) with Dr. Kane and Stephanie Singer of the Upper Maumee Watershed Partnership as co-authors.

Dr. Kane was featured in a front-page article in The Crescent-News regarding the Toledo water crisis and its links to nutrients entering the Upper Maumee River (http://www.crescent-news.com/). Further, he is also featured in a press release about the Toledo water crisis on the International Association for Great Lakes Research (IAGLR) website (http://iaglr.org/docs/items/2014ToledoWaterBan.pdf). Additionally, former Defiance College student (and current University of Toledo graduate student) Phoenix Golnick is pictured sampling the algal bloom in this press release. On a lighter note, Doug is also mentioned as “dropping the puck” for the annual Defy Cup between U.S. and Canadian scientists at the Annual Conference on Great Lakes Research held in Hamilton, Ontario in May (http://iaglr.org/docs/items/IAGLR_Hockey_2014.pdf).”

Earlier this year, Dr. Kane was named President of the International Association for Great Lakes Research (IAGLR) at the 57th Conference on Great Lakes Research at McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario. He also presented “Microcystis blooms and phosphorus dynamics in two of Lake Erie’s agricultural tributaries (Maumee and Sandusky rivers)” based on research conducted with scientists from The Ohio State University and the Ohio Division of Wildlife. For more information on the conference and IAGLR please visit http://iaglr.org/iaglr2014/ .

He was also recently elected a Fellow of The Ohio Academy of Science. Kane joins less than 150 current Fellows who have been elected based on having “rendered some special service to the Academy or hav(ing) made extensive, productive scientific, technological or educational contributions to society.” To see a list of the current Fellows, visit http://ohiosci.org/fellowship/. He will be recognized for this honor at the Annual Meeting of The Ohio Academy of Science next April.

Further, Dr. Kane has just had two peer-reviewed articles and an introductory piece published in the Journal of Great Lakes Research. These articles are a part of a special section of the most recent issue of the journal titled “Lake Erie: From watersheds to open water” for which Doug was a special guest Associate Editor. These three articles are collaborations with researchers from The Ohio State University, University of Toledo, SUNY- Buffalo State, and Heidelberg University. DEFIANCE COLLEGE

HONOR ROLL OF DONORS

Recognizing those who have supported the College for the 12-month period from July 1, 2013 through June 30, 2014
Once again, it is my great privilege to acknowledge and thank the vast number of alumni, friends of the College, parents, faculty, and staff who have contributed financial support to Defiance College in the past year.

Day in and day out, the faculty, staff, and administrators at Defiance College are focused on helping our students to learn, to serve, and to grow. And we are all proud of the many ways our students benefit from rigorous academics, meaningful undergraduate research, mentoring from caring and knowledgeable faculty, hands-on experiences that link the classroom and the real world, leadership opportunities through Project 701 (our innovative student-run non-profit) and so many other service and other opportunities, athletic and extracurricular activities, domestic and international travel, exposure to the arts, and much more.

But I never forget that without the support of the people named on the following pages, we would not be able to do any of this.

I also recognize that it is not just your financial support that keeps Defiance College vital. You help us in other ways as well, including providing internships and job experience to our students, mentoring and advising our students, applauding DC students’ performances on the concert stage and cheering for them on athletic fields, and also providing a stellar example to today’s students of how to use your DC education to live a life full of meaning and joy.

From the bottom of my heart, thank you. Thank you for lifting us up and cheering us on, for helping at Freshman Orientation, for giving guidance to the DC students who work for you, for coming back for Homecoming, and for wearing your Purple and Gold proudly. And, thank you for the generous gifts that allow us to do the important work of helping these wonderful young men and women craft their own roadmaps to success.

Defiance College’s director of music programs Andrew Schultz has not only led the expansion of DC’s music programs but has also created and grown the Black Swamp Honors Choir into a very special experience for Northwest Ohio high school choir students. Schultz started the event as part of the growth of the College’s music programs while expanding musical horizons of high school students in Northwest Ohio.

The Black Swamp Honors Choir began in 2010 with participants from four local high schools. The 2014 auditions included 11 area schools with more than 160 students auditioning for approximately 90 spots in the choir. Selected students spend Thursday evening and Saturday rehearsing with Defiance College’s Chamber Singers and Choral Union as well as a guest choir. This year, the Pride of Toledo Sweet Adeline Chorus participated. In addition to working with Schultz, choir members are also able to work with well known choral conductor Richard Mathey.

The culminating event is the W. Oscar Jones Choral Festival, which was held this year on Sunday, Nov. 2, in St. John United Church of Christ. The concert has grown in popularity and participation, necessitating two performances to accommodate the large audiences.

The event was named in honor of the late W. Oscar Jones, known for his many contributions to the Defiance community and the choral art in the 1930s and 40s.
For the second straight year, Defiance College has won the Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference Regular Season Volleyball Championship. For more information go to www.DefianceAthletics.com.
